

BBC CHILDREN IN NEED AND CHILDREN IN NEED LIMITED MODERN SLAVERY STATEMENT

FINANCIAL YEAR ENDED 30 JUNE 2020

This statement is made pursuant to section 54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015. It constitutes BBC Children in Need and Children in Need Limited's fifth statement setting out the work undertaken during the financial year ended 30 June 2020 to further identify, prevent and address modern slavery across our organisations and supply chains.

1. ORGANISATION

BBC Children in Need exists to change the lives of disadvantaged children and young people in the UK. Our vision is that every child in the UK has a childhood which is safe, happy and secure and allows them to reach their potential. BBC Children in Need has one wholly owned trading subsidiary, Children in Need Limited and together we have 138 employees based across the UK.

We have a varied supply chain covering services which are provided within the UK, a wide range of products and branded merchandise including those manufactured overseas, and UK based licensees. We are committed to working to ensure everyone who works for and with us is treated fairly, is able to work safely and has their human rights protected and respected. We have a responsibility to work to ensure modern slavery is not present in any form across the charity and within our supply chains and we are committed to ensuring our practices support this.

As the BBC's corporate charity, BBC Children in Need is supported by, and seeks to align itself to the policies of the BBC in a number of ways, including our approach to modern slavery. Members of both BBC Children in Need and Children in Need Limited are core members of the BBC Group's Modern Slavery Working Group and feed in to BBC Group modern slavery programmes and initiatives. 2. APPROACH TO TACKLING MODERN SLAVERY

We have adopted a targeted approach to identifying and tackling ethical issues, including modern slavery, in our organisation and supply chain. The key focus over the last year has been on embedding our current programme. We will continue to keep our approach under review.

In line with our programme we have structured governance and management arrangements focused on the issue of modern slavery

- Our work to tackle modern slavery is overseen by internal stakeholders. This year the group has become more focused, based on risk areas within the organisation.
- We are part of the BBC's Modern Slavery Working Group which further facilitates collaboration across the BBC Group. The Modern Slavery Working Group is also supported by internal subject matter experts, and external specialists, where beneficial.
- Our Trustees receive an annual update on our activities in relation to tackling modern slavery.
- Our Ethical Policy and programme are overseen by our Executive Team.

We have continued to ensure our people and suppliers are aware of our policies which highlight our ethical requirements

- Our policies and guidelines across the organisation and the BBC set out our expectations of our people, stakeholders and suppliers. All staff involved in sourcing or licensing of products are also expected to follow the requirements of our ethical trading programme.
- Our Ethical Policy sets out our expectations of our suppliers. It is in line with the Ethical Trading Initiative Base Code and reflects the International Labour Organisations Conventions and Recommendations including clauses covering forced labour. This policy forms part of our standard Supplier Terms of Trade, Freelance Terms and our agreements with corporate partners and licensees, except in cases where licensees' own policies are deemed to set a higher standard than or equivalent to ours. The policy sets out our requirements on labour standards and is prefaced by a list of minimum standards that partners must meet before we are able to work with them. It is issued at the point of engagement with the individual or supplier and is reviewed periodically. A copy of our Ethical Policy is available on request.
- We continued to communicate the BBC's Code of Conduct internally to all members of the organisation. The Code sets our expectations of ethical conduct, fair, respectful treatment, and also highlights how our employees and others engaged on BBC Children in Need business may raise concerns.

Risk remains crucial factor in informing and determining the priorities and focus of our modern slavery programme

- We continue to identify where greater ethical risk exists to help target our activity. Examples include where workers are more likely to be at risk of ethical issues, including modern slavery, based on the type of product or service being provided, their geographic location and any known previous issues or the scale and type of our relationship with suppliers. These factors affect our ability to influence and impact change.
- We continue to determine that our risk is greatest in our supply chain categories of official merchandise, branded product for promotional use and licensed product. Our due diligence measures therefore continue to focus on these areas.

Our due diligence processes were embedded across the organisation and strengthened for key licensing partners and new suppliers

- We have continued to focus on fully embedding the more detailed due diligence processes that we introduced last year into our licensed product approval process.
- In addition, we focused on our largest licensing partner in particular this year to undertake more detailed due diligence by reviewing factory audits for all ranges of licensed product.
- We continue to review ethical trade questionnaires or audit reports for our core products.
- We have also strengthened ethical trade requirements within our on-boarding and tender processes for new suppliers and licensees to ensure consistency in evaluating potential partners' ethical trade processes and controls prior to the start of any relationship.
- Finally, we continue to seek support from internal specialists within the BBC to conduct a second verification of our due diligence where we consider this appropriate.

We continue to build awareness across key internal and external stakeholders

- Training on ethical and fair trading remains part of our awareness approach for relevant members of staff, along with regular knowledge sharing.
- Responsibility for oversight of ethical compliance, particularly within trading and licensing, has been allocated to our Head of Partnerships this year to reflect its importance and to drive overall consistency in implementation within operational teams.
- We also provide guidance documentation to product manufacturers and licensees on how to follow our ethical trading programme, underlining that minimum standards on forced labour and other serious issues must be met before a factory can be approved for production.

- Our whistleblowing policy includes human rights issues, such as modern slavery. This policy continued to be available for our staff to use if they become concerned. There were no issues relating to modern slavery raised over the last year.

3. FUTURE PLANS AND PRIORITIES

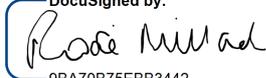

We appreciate the significance of our role in helping to identify, prevent and help eradicate modern slavery. We are committed to continuously improving and evolving our practices in relation to operating a responsible organisation, sourcing products and services ethically, and helping to raise standards across the industry.

In line with our programme, during the next year we will:

- undertake a detailed risk assessment to continue to inform our Modern Slavery Programme;
- review our Ethical Policy to ensure alignment with good practice and the BBC Groups Ethical Policy (if appropriate) and ease of use;
- consider the particular impact that Covid-19 may have on our organisation and supply chains in respect of modern slavery and determine appropriate ways to mitigate risks;
- develop and start to implement measures to help us monitor the effectiveness of our programme and to assess its results;
- conduct factory site visits on certain products to back up audit reviews;
- Focus communications and awareness-raising activity on key risk areas.

This Statement was approved by the Board on 13 October 2020.
